Matt says

With the Holiday Season just around the corner, this was the perfect story to read with Neo. Dot is the smallest reindeer in Santa's North Pole venture. She is not able to leap, fly, or do much of anything to earn a spot on the Christmas Eve team, but desperately wants to make a difference. Dot tries her best and does anything she can to learn the ins and outs of flying, but nothing seems to work. When Christmas Eve arrives, Dot is saddened when she is not harnessed up, but finds a special gift that only she can complete. Neo liked this piece and I hope it can become part of our annual tradition.

The message is clear even the littlest can pitch in and help.

Lovely illustrations.

Bethany says

In THE LITTLEST REINDEER, Dot wants to help fly Santa's sleigh, but she's too small. Her family tries to help her, but it's no use. Dot is just too little and feels defeated. Her friend Oliver tries to cheer her up by showing her all of the things she can do.

Dot may not be able to fly, run, or jump, but she can make a snowman, play tag, make Christmas cards, and even help others. Dot realizes there's a lot she can do even though she can't help fly the sleigh yet. But when a gift gets left behind, it's up to Dot to save the day (or someone's Christmas I should say).

I thought the illustrations were so cute and I loved how the story had a good moral. It teaches that just because you can't do something, doesn't mean you're weak or too small. There's plenty of other things one can achieve. I also really liked how her family tries to help her learn to fly the sleigh.

Final Verdict: This read is perfect for children who love reindeer, especially during Christmas time. I look forward to reading this one with my little girl on Christmas Eve. It was a light and enjoyable read with a good message.
