Paige says

I really enjoyed this and it really surprised me. I'm not a poetry person in the slightest. And I guess to put that in perspective it's like I can read a poem, enjoy it, but then in ten minutes it's completely wiped from my thoughts and I have trouble remembering what it's about. So I'm really not qualified to give an in depth reading except for I really did enjoy it and I'm still thinking about it hours later. My favorite sections were the one titled quilting and eight pointed star.

This wasn't my favorite collection of Clifton's poems, but it was a worthwhile read, especially for the poems from Log Cabin.

Lucille Clifton is a poet I am drawn to again and again. I first read these poems in the early 90s. I consider them old friends.
