Avengement Sam Black

April 1960

On prom night, JOE CLARK and SUE ANDRETTI, a heartthrob couple, had their dreams crushed in a car accident caused by three members of Chicago's mafia. Sue died instantly. As a child, Joe caused his mother constant worry and heartache. His quick temper landed him in a boy's detention school, where he survived the harsh environment with help from his cell mate and friend, JIMMY ROBBINS, a Negro from Chicago. BROWNIE, a banded hundred pound mixed breed dog, was rescued by Joe. Their bond could never be broken. Jimmy Robbins' sister was forced to work for the Chicago mafia. Joe and Jimmy both sought revenge against the mafia.

DISCLAIMER: I received this book for free through the Goodreads giveaways.

Absolutely loved the crisp, clean cut, rapid fire, no nonsense style of writing. There were no embellishments needed for the story was flowing cursively.

Enjoyed the read and always kept me on my toes wondering at which point will Joe break. But he came through and delivered a very satisfying end.

I also liked the honesty of the story: it wasn't about fancy emotions and over-analyzing life's meaning, but all about those subtle memories that stir something deep inside when they remind you of the people who made you the person you are today (punctuated by the leitmotif of Joe's memory of his dad getting struck by the lightning).
