This book was simply magnificent. An incredibly engaging story in a richly imaginative world that currently has been plunged into terror, death, and then a last hope battle to end all torment. First friendship, then a love story wrapped in mystical richness that soars above and attempts to triumph over one of the wickedest, vilest, ugliest and blackest of souls that hopefully never finds a counterpart on our planet Earth. I was completely drawn into this story as I learned about the appalling conditions on Terrene, the Sanctified Mastema Guards, and the bonded mates. It is all about the blood, Mastema blood.

Alys Neale's family knew she was Mastema and that means a great deal but also having to leave on her sixteenth birthday to train at a special academy. She is more than 'just' Mastema; she is a 'prophet'. In this world, a prophet is one who is recognized as being Mastema at the time of conception and becomes an elder. This is very rare. This sub story and relationship to her bonded mate was compelling, distinctly sweet, and a beacon of courage for all those around her. She spoke right to my heart!

Leah Brampton was Alys's best friend right from the beginning. Leah knew she loved Alys, but felt uncomfortable expressing her feelings. She is totally bereft, when Alys seems to disappear on her sixteenth birthday. By tradition, only a few knew who Alys was and why she had to leave for two years. Leah eventually goes through an astounding transformation that is practically more amazing than what happens to Alys. However, the pain of being separated from her love during her tender teen years remained a mark on her soul. I loved Leah!

This grand and sweeping tale moves with majesty, expansive vistas, charming details of friends, families, elders, lovers, and oh my goodness the august, black, fearless horses called Acrábases. Oh yes, the bad guys get their air-time, too. The loving moments shared are so tastefully presented yet the intimate heat and passion found a life via my imagination. A sense of child-like wonder permeates all the way through this story accompanied by an annealing sense of healing and affection. I would have adored having a book like this read to me. I believe teens to seniors might find this appealing.

Apologies for repeating myself, but this simply has to be read so one can feel and grasp the incredible scope, vision, and beauty presented with such passionate attention to detail and heart. I most certainly recommend this to anyone enjoying an outstanding journey in a far-off land.

Loved the book where it's in a different world, and for a couple of hours I was doing nothing other than immersing myself into the book. I think however, the book is a little bit short in the length for the plot it is going for. It would have been so much more enjoyable if it's another hundred pages longer. The other thing I love about the book is the writing style. It's simple but it conveys so much about the characters.

Just finished reading. Bought it yesterday and could not put down! Awesome book. Great connection between characters, vivid, descriptive writing and creative story line. Must read.

I won this book on Goodreads Firstreads. I enjoyed this story. The main characters were well defined. The world building was good. The storyline was good, I at times felt that the love life of the main characters were being drawn out. But that might just be me. I believe Whitney N. Lee did a great job writing this story.
