The Election-Day Disaster Ron Roy , Timothy Bush (Illustrator)
THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION is less than a week away, but KC and Marshall have more important things on their minds—their Halloween party at the White House! The morning after the costume party, though, KC and Marshall wake up to a trick, not a treat. Someone has posted damaging photos of the president on the Internet, photos that were digitally doctored! Will they ruin President Thornton's chances for a second term? Or can KC and Marshall rescue the election?

!!!! Awesome!!! I love it.

Dolly says

This is another suspensful story in the Capital Mysteries series. Our girls have really enjoyed this series and we look forward to reading more together. The tales aren't all that realistic, but this one demonstrates the dangers of sharing files online and how pictures can be easily manipulated nowadays.

Payton says

Someone is trying to not let the president not win by using pictures they took on the Halloween and changing them.Now it was on TV and the election day is three days away.

Sophie Muller says

I was pretty surprised at the turn of event in KS's since I read the first and then the last book if this series! The plot was entertaining and I found it hard to put the book down!

Luke Ewell says

It is almost Halloween and KC and Marshall are going to have a party for Halloween. When the party starts they see a stange costume and they don't know who it is. They find out that he is taking picture to make the president look bad. The election day was almost there. KC didn't want to have to leave the White House so she and Marshall tried to find out who did it. They found out it was a security guard who was just taking pictures and sending them to his friends but they got on the internet and made the president look bad. The president wins and KC gets to stay in the White House for another 4 years. This is an ok book.

In this story, these smart kids even influenced the election, really cool.

Jessica Beaver says

Cute story...my son finished reading it to me today.

Kaytee says

they figured out that these pictures of the president looked like he did mean things to peaple so they figured out who did it but it was a prank

Caleb says

I liked it. Somebody took pictures of the president doing bad things and then put them on the news so people wouldn't vote for him again.

Sydney says

when election day is less then a week away and k.c. and her friend Marshall have to plan there Halloween party they wake up trick a real trick someone is posting ugly pictures of the president.

Luca says

THta one is rather creepy, really a president stuffing a kids face into the water.

Nathaniel says

I liked it. It's about the president gives a party and someone spies on it and takes pictures to make them look mean.

Amanda Lee says

Good beginning chapter book mystery. Kind of like the Magic Treehouse series.
