The God who saves is also a God who woos His own to a relationship primarily of the heart. As we draw closer to Him, we must choose to let go of other "less-wild lovers," such as perfectionistic drivenness and self-indulgence. Eldredge and Curtis identify the lies offered by "false loves" and instruct us on the journey back to the Lover of our souls. In carefully crafted words and images, the authors entice the reader to his or her own journey of the heart, promising, "It is possible to recover the lost life of our heart and with it the intimacy, beauty, and adventure of life with God."

Diane Stevens says

One of my favorite feel-good books! I have read it several times.

Brandi says

Two different books. Two different authors. I enjoyed them both. Completely different books, not sequels. Both were books I could read, put down, and come back to. Easy to get back into the story.

A feel good read

Picked this book by the cover. Was not disappointing. Enjoyed the big picture and the attention to detail. Can't wait to read others from this author.

Julee Anderson varela says

Good, easy read but the amount of typos were ridiculous!
