Early-mid nineties. The book is a collection of short stories, mostly set in the 1990s. The author's style is very descriptive and detailed, capturing the essence of the era. The characters are well-developed and the plot is engaging. The book is a must-read for anyone interested in contemporary Indian literature.

The author's writing is very smooth and easy to read. The characters are very well-defined and the plot is very interesting. The book is a great read for anyone who enjoys a good story. It's not everyday that I sit down to write about a Bangla book. There are a few that not only tug a few strings at the heart, but pull them hard enough to inflict pain. Kachher Manush (The Close One) by Suchitra Bhattacharya is an epic work in contemporary Bangla Literature.

Suchitra Bhattacharya has kept it simple with this book. She flourishes with the story rather than fancy words and articulation. It's the story that holds you together till the last page, perhaps yearning for more at the end. My favourite character is Indrani and it's a revelation that such people exist, at least within book covers.

Highly recommended for anyone who can read Bangla. For others, you have to wait till some kind soul decides to translate the book to near perfection.

Nothing short in an amazing storytelling by Suchitra Bhattacharya. For the 1st time I have read a novel of 650+ pages. Absolutely mesmerized. Totally shattered by the tragic end. A solid 5 Star from me
