Devotion Calls Caridad Piñeiro

In Spanish Harlem, real danger comes in nonhuman form. A night stalker haunts the barrio, feeding its insatiable hunger, craving the humanity only healer Ricardo Fernandez can give him. For Ricardo is cursed with the ability to heal, and hurt, by touch--a talent he hides behind the practice of Santeria.

Sara Martinez knows there's no such thing as faith healing, until Ricardo's gifts become her last hope. And Ricardo's passion becomes something she can't live without.

But when the night stalker uses Sara as bait, Ricardo must choose between two evils: lose the woman he loves or lose himself to the darkness of his powers.

Michelle Leah Olson says

Caridad introduces another interesting character into an already eclectic mix of who's who in this one. I've always known that Sara had spunk. It was great to see just how much! :-)

Eve says

I like the premise, but am not really sold on both the romance (they fall in love like right off the bat) and the plot.

Unapologetic_Bookaholic says

I am not sure if the main character was a witch or a man of God. This was a strange book because there was a healing power involved that could be interpreted either way, depending on your beliefs. That said the chupacabra was a monster that was a man that feels the healing power from the main characters. the chupacabra thinks the main character can he heal him and turn him human again. Altho fiction I feel the author lifted some truths from the santeria and I was able to enjoy a new kind of PNR. Not quite about werewolves or any kind of creatures I'd ever heard of.
