Guilty Diane Hoh

Katie Sullivan has everything: a nice roommate, cool friends, and a great guy. Until the day she and her boyfriend are out on the river and their canoe overturns. She survives--he doesn't. Katie can't stop thinking about the accident, wondering if it was her fault. But someone else has already decided . . . and the verdict is guilty.

Wow, this was just bad. The main character wasn't that likeable and with everything happening in the last part I just disliked the book more.

I felt sorry for Katie, that she had to lose her boyfriend like that, but what she did after seemed a bit extreme. I can imagine that she would want to be active and keep the evil thoughts at bay, but can't she also see that it might just look weird for her to party around while everyone else is mourning/sad? And can't she imagine that people might get angry with her?

Throughout most of the book I was confused with Katie. Was someone really targeting her? Or was she just delusional? After all she had quite a traumatic experience.

But that was the trouble with this book. It was just too confusing and around the middle I just thought Katie was crazy.

Luckily the ending part explains everything to us, and that is also the most exciting part, where we finally find out who did it and why and what. That was also the part that saved this book from a 1 star. The ending was quite awesome, though a bit too unbelievable at times. At it made me dislike the other characters some more.

I also didn't particularly like any of the other characters. At first I liked Brownie, but as the book continues it was quite clear that there was trouble in paradise. The other characters were bleh. Mostly because they either didn't seem to care, or cared too much, or thought that Katie was just delusional/crazy. It was a bit too conflicting, I wished they would have made up their minds. It also didn't help Katie that one time they were acting like she was nuts, while the other time she was treated like she was fragile and needed hugs.

There were enough scary moments, but with how Katie acts, I wasn't always sure if they were real, and that took away some of the creepiness/scariness. Which is a shame.

The perpetrator (Of course, I won't give names.) was a sick person, and while I had some suspicions, it still came as a surprise it was that person.

Normally I can deduct quite well who the perpetrator is, but with this book? Nope, everyone was guilty, everyone was a suspect. Even the main character.

All in all, I wouldn't recommend this book. And I hope to find the other books in this series someday. I still got a few I haven't found/read.

Good but aside from a certain character's hidden feelings the overall culprit was too obvious in my eyes.

Yet another who dunnit killer book from the Point Horror series that is largely devoid of originality. After her boyfriend drowns in a canoeing accident that she was involved in, Kate begins to think someone has it in for her and wants her to pay. There are twists and turns and the reveal is interesting enough but the plot lacks excitement and has been a little too often. Still worth the read but not one of the stronger entries to the series.

I can not find this book anywhere!!!! I first read it back in 2000, I was shopping and saw the book on a shelf. I bought it and went home & read it in a day. All I remember about the book is a girl feels guilty because her bf died while drowning in a lake. She couldn't save him, so now everywhere she goes she hears his voice or sees him. This is similar to R.L. Stines book The Boyfriend. This is the first Nightmare Hall book I read and my most favorite. I wish I could find it! (Update: I found it on EBay and bought it.)

Good mystery book for kids.

Diane Hoh is amazing at creating twisted villains who's reasons for doing the things they do make perfect sense in their heads and theirs alone.
