Sasha says

Another good everyday life-applicable book of stories of children learning lessons from scripture.

Misty Lynne says

This book along with the others in the series (wisdom and the Millers and Prudence and the Millers) were wonderful. These are great read alouds for children. They teach morals through wonderful stories of life in the Miller family.

Abigail Rasmussen says

I read this book when I was 8 years old. My Mom has also read this series out loud to us, reading a chapter each night to go along with our family devotions.

Nevada Libert says

i like the lessons that they taught in that book.

Maggie says

Very nice read. Read it in about 45 minutes. Pretty short book, only 110 pages.

Jarvis "Mclovin" says

moral: if a robber points a gun at you, let him shoot you.

Kendra Fletcher says

All of my kids have favorite stories or memories from this book.

David says

Personally, I love this series for supporting the morals I am teaching in the home. It is from a very fundamental (Mennonite) way of thinking, if that offends you. I adore them.

Amy says

A Miller family book for younger children.

Karen says

Ellie rated this book 5 stars, Jacob 3 stars---he liked the Proverb's with the Miller book better but is still looking forward to reading more of these books.

Leavitt Ladies says

great lessons, I really liked how it was about Family's, but they were not christians but oh well

Leah Kwasiborski says

I thought it was pretty good if your a homeschooler you rock
