Twin-Text: The Big Book of How

I paired both books together because the books give facts that children most likely would like to know. The books both contain different topics, such as facts about: animals, people, history, places and the biology of the human body. The books bring information that children most likely do not know because it is not something that is talked about in school or at home.

This small book is filled with 300 "weird but true" facts which are accompanied by color photos. Many of these facts are about animals - I love animals!

Pages 40-41. "Some birds 'talk' to their unhatched eggs."

"Dogs can understand human speech."

"Goats communicate with humans by staring at them."

Did you know that we have "smell receptors" in our lungs? p. 189

Had some interesting information. My nephew and I had some fun discussions and we researched a few of the things that they mentioned.

Nice starting points to get some good discussion going.
