SaturNalia says

Daisuke's pregnant sister shows up and the rest of the manga centers on her. Felt like an after school special on pregnancy. Lost sight of the main couple and thier issues.

Rafa says

Muy bueno, se va desarrollando de buena forma la historia y mantiene el interés.

Ok, es más como un 4.5.

La historia de la primera mitad de este tomo me pareció algo repetitiva, pero tal vez pensé eso porque inicié justo al terminar el segundo. Lo dejé por un tiempo y apenas lo retomé este lunes.

Pero la segunda mitad, vaya que fue emocional. Claro, tenía a mi primo M. gritando a cada rato exageradamente porque estaba viendo Flash, pero aun así se conservó bien el sentimiento. El tomo terminó representando, creo, muy bien la forma en la que las madres se sienten después de perder a sus hijos.

Me hizo pensar algunas cosas.

En fin, ya terminé este tomo. Iniciaré el cuarto probablemente esta misma semana y veré como termina la historia de estos personajes.

In volume 3, Daisuke's sister makes her appearance and the story starts to focus on her a bit more. I read some of the reviews and saw that people thought the focus shifted from the main couple to the sister and that took away from the story. I have to disagree, but it's totally my opinion.

It is true that the story starts to focus on the sister, but given the dark material of the plot thus far, I rather found it welcoming. I don't think this arc took away from the main story at all, but actually assisted in furthering it along. There is a crucial element to this arc that affects the plot as it flows into the fourth volume. I also really liked the diversion from the main couple because it felt like it gave the series a bit more depth. I think when a manga focuses entirely on a specific person(s) for too long it makes the series very tedious and repetitive. The author of this story did a great job of implementing the sister arc without drawing the focus away from Daisuke and Hinako.

As the plot thickens, I find myself actuely impatient to find out what happens next. This is a very good series so far. I enjoy stories that have dark, intense elements but have a hard time finding ones that are written so well.

So I finished reading this like a few minutes ago and it was all right. For the overall series, I give it two stars.

I gave it two stars because there wasn't anything like really amazing about it. It was just Okay. Plus, I didn't really like the art that much.

The ending was really cheesy. The characters were really cheesy. The whole concept of the story was kind of sad but nothing really made it original. Which could have made it better, if it had something to the plot that made it the same cliché but with a good twist.

So yeah, I think that the overall series could have been better. Though, there were some events in the story that really stood out to me. I'm not gonna point them out because this is supposed to be a spoiler-free review, so... yeah. :D

So Kriss and Andi(my brothers), it wasn't that amazing as you thought. Oh, and while we're on this topic, you guys need to read more of a variety of books. :P

So all in all, the overall series gets 2 stars.

Solace Winter says

This manga is about to get even more tragic. It's horribly depressing, the focus is less on the main "couple" and more on Daisuke's sister, but it's a perfect step in the right direction for good storytelling. It's dark but it gives this manga something it needs, which is less teen angst and more meeting head on with tragedies, since this story is based off of tragedy to begin with.

Aurora says

"more than her" was so sad. This whole manga in general is sad.

Kristelle says

Art is fine. Story is great. I read it when I was in highschool and reread it a few days ago but it still emits an aura of self-realization. WORLD is not that great at all, it alone. But the people living in it somehow give the world a color. Pain, Misery, Agony, Fear, Hate, Happiness, Joy and Love are just few of the many things that makes the world interesting.

This manga when I read it made me cry. I cried without knowing I actually did. I did not know because MAYBE I am thinking that I was not impressed but somehow the other part of me felt the intensity of the character's situation. This was actually a drama story that simply captivates and hurts your heart without penetrating the body.

Before you read it, cast aside all your expectation and lock yourself inside the little room built by the author, that way you will be able to open your mind and heart. CHEERS!
