The beauty's in the fall...

For Autumn, the education she's getting from books just isn't helping her in the life she leads. After all, a young black woman needs to learn a lot more than just what comes from school. With graduation coming up and college right around the corner, she's got a lot to learn—lessons that no teacher ever taught her.

Now, she must ignore the constant fighting and wars between her parents, and start focusing on herself. When she falls for a man, he leads her down paths she has no business going. But with each climb she makes to the top, the farther she falls. Will Autumn get the hardest education of all and learn to see the beauty in the fall?

Green

My first thought is how green Autumn is but she will try anything....sex, three some, weed, runner....knowing she was raised in church. My journey stops here with her story because my attention waivered

Drama filled beginning to series as Autumn experienced some disappointments while finding her place. Storyline was good and held my attention. I'm not so sure about Rodney. I guess his reason for his actions will come in the next part
